Erasmus+: Interested in being a Teaching Assistant in a Hospital School in Turin (ITALY)?

The hospital school "Ospedale Regina Margherita" in Turin is looking for a teaching assistant for the next school year (2016/17). We want to give our students the opportunity to breathe an international and intercultural atmosphere even if they are in a hospital.

The children's hospital is one of the most important and well known in Italy. Our students are between 14-18 years old. Due to their illness, our students cannot attend their home school and are taught in the hospital until they are discharged. Depending on the kind of illness, teaching takes place in small groups or individually by the bedside.

The school is situated in the beautiful city of Turin, very close to the city center with its vibrant city life. Turin offers a very rich cultural life and many opportunities for young people since it is a university city.

The teaching subject of the assistant is not of importance for us, what matters more is the ability to teach her/his subject matter in English. Moreover, our school is involved in different European and regional projects, in which we expect the assistant's support in planning and organizing various activities. Apart from being flexible and able to adapt teaching methods to the health conditions of our students, the social competence of the assistant is particularly important for us. The work as an assistant is diverse, exciting, challenging and a good preparation for future teachers.

If you are interested in being a teaching assistant in the school, please send a short CV to scuolaoirm2@virgilio.it pointing out your preferred times and duration of the internship. We will gladly answer any further questions you might have.
